

BNML Photog Group

September 12th, 2023

You can take snaps, and you can create art!

Today's Topics

- Photographers to Follow: Mads Peter Iversen
- Shooting in Layers
- Autumn Photography

Photographers to Follow

Viewing the work of talented photographers can help inspire your own photography.

Mads Peter Iversen

A Danish landscape photographer and YouTube educator with a terrific eye for dramatic scenes.

<https://www.mpipphoto.dk/>

Shooting in Layers

Mads Iversen released a YouTube video about what he calls:
5 STEPS to take ABSOLUTELY EPIC landscape PHOTOS – with any lens!
https://youtu.be/fDzIo0DAf3w?si=PKQv8Dgm7MKG_h_J

One of the key steps is shooting in layers, that is, foreground, midground, and background.

Tips for Shooting Fall Foliage

The Fall colors are almost here!

Here are a few tips for getting memorable fall photos.

- Try shooting on cloudy or overcast days. The soft lighting makes the colors pop! (Make sure your white balance is on cloudy.) And the clouds can look great.
- You can get extra color by shooting at the golden hour, which adds an orange hue to everything.
- A panorama shot of a mountain or forest can be very nice.

- Reflections on the water doubles the impact! There's a swamp on Buck Hollow Road that makes nice reflections.

- Close-ups of a few leaves is also quite nice.
- Pumpkins! Boyden Winery often has a bunch, and Farr Farm in Richmond. Don't forget cornfields, especially when they dry out.

- Main Street looking towards Mansfield gives a nice mix of town and country. Actually, any road, especially dirt roads, that are flanked by autumn trees makes a nice photo.

- A dog or a person running through the fallen leaves is a nice shot. Use a fast shutter! Or cows or horses in a pasture surrounded by woods.

- A barn or old building surrounded by trees.

- What ideas do you have for fall photos?